BEST PRACTICE
Making Copies of Employee Documents

It is a company policy that we do not make copies of employee documents. However, there is one exception: if an employee presents a U.S. Passport, U.S. Passport Card, Form I-551, or Form I-766, make a photocopy of the document, print a copy of the Form I-9, and keep both in a Form I-9 file sorted alphabetically by employee last name.

Frequently Asked Questions

Q: Why does a screen pop up asking if the employee is using a foreign passport or driver's license?
A: Foreign passports and driver's licenses have specific requirements for the Issuing Authority and Document # fields, which have been built into VerifyNow!. Making this selection prompts these field requirements, ensuring the Form I-9 is correctly filled out before it is submitted.

Q: What am I supposed to enter for the Permanent Resident Card document number? Why am I receiving an "invalid input field format" error message?
A: The correct document number is at the bottom of the card and consists of three letters followed by ten numbers. A person's Alien # is NOT the document number.

Q: What do I do with a Resident Alien Card that has neither an expiration date nor a document number?
A: Cards issued before 1997 may not have an expiration date or document number. For these cards, enter AAA0000000000 in the Document Number field.

Q: Can abbreviations be used when filling out Section 2?
A: When entering the issuing authority for the employee's documents, you can use "SSA" for Social Security Administration and "DHS" for Department of Homeland Security. For any other issuing authority, however, you must spell it out completely. You must also enter your full title for the signature at the end of Section 2 (i.e. Business Solutions Specialist versus BSS).

Q: The employee presented a Social Security Card that says it is not valid for employment or valid for employment only with INS or DHS approval. Can I still use this as a List C document?
A: Any Social Security Card that says "Not valid for employment", "Valid for work only with INS authorization", or "Valid for work only with DHS authorization" are for identification purposes only, and are not a valid List C document to verify employment eligibility. The employee must present you with a different List C document for verification.
